More elected officials are standing for Life

For years, many in the media and political class have tried to convince pro-lifers that we are isolated, shrinking, and destined to disappear quietly into history.

And yet, year after year, thousands gather publicly to defend the dignity of all human life.

This year's March for Life in Edmonton also saw something else: a growing number of federal and provincial elected officials – MLAs, Ministers, and MPs – standing publicly alongside ordinary pro-life Albertans in the cause for Life.

This did not happen by accident. It happened because people like you kept showing up. Kept speaking up. Kept refusing to surrender to discouragement or silence.

Movements survive when ordinary people continue standing publicly and consistently for what is right. This is why public courage and public witness continue to matter.

The other side wants discouragement. They want exhaustion. They want people to quietly conclude that nothing can change. In short: they want you to give up.

But history is filled with people who kept going before victory was fully visible.

So today, let this simply serve as a reminder: the cause of defending innocent human life is still worth fighting for.

Thank you for standing with us in the battle.

For Life. For Alberta.
